Daniel's law prohibits disclosure of the residential addresses of certain persons covered by the law ("Covered Persons") on websites controlled by state, county, and local government agencies. The community of Covered Persons includes former, active, and retired judicial officers, prosecutors, and members of law enforcement and their immediate family members residing in the same household.

With respect to Internet postings other than those on New Jersey state, county, and municipal government websites, an authorized person, as defined by law, seeking to prohibit the disclosure of the home address or unpublished home telephone number of any covered person shall provide written notice to the entity or person advising that they are an authorized person and that they are requesting that the entity or person cease the disclosure of the information and remove the protected information from the Internet or where it is otherwise made available. See, N.J.S.A. 2C:20-31.1(c) and N.J.S.A. 56:8-166.1(a)(2).

On July 13, 2023, the Office of Information Privacy ("OIP") opened a portal for Covered Persons to register for data protections under Daniel's Law. Since that time, nearly 9,000 Covered Persons – active, formerly active, or retired judicial officers, law enforcement officers and prosecutors as Daniel's Law defines them – have taken advantage of this new statute, entrusting the OIP with their residential and household member information. The OPI securely shares this information with a network of trusted redactors who are tasked with removing that information from state, county, and municipal government websites. By January 2023, nearly 1,800 redactors had registered with the OIP to carry out this task. As of August 1, 2024, child protective investigators also will be eligible to register with the OIP and request redaction protections.
