U.S. employee engagement is at its lowest level since 2011. How do you sustain your own motivation and support your staff when engagement is low, demands are growing, and resources are limited?

This webinar offers practical approaches for supervisors and managers in state, county, and local government. Learn to recognize potential causes of disengagement, distinguish motivation concerns from workload and organizational barriers, and strengthen everyday supervisory practices.

Discover ways to clarify expectations, recognize contributions fairly, support employee development, and connect daily responsibilities to meaningful public service. The webinar also addresses maintaining your own effectiveness, conducting constructive employee conversations, and raising concerns that require decisions beyond your authority.

Speaker: Professor Stephen C. Betts, Ph.D, William Paterson University
